

JOSEPH
WILLIAMS
STATE REPRESENTATIVE

- Native Tennessean
- Taught History in Nashville Public Schools
- Attorney, specializing in First Amendment protections
- Lives in Crieve Hall with wife Palmer & two young boys

Joseph Williams, a native Tennessean, is an attorney and founding partner of The Peacefield Group, a law firm in Nashville. Prior to founding The Peacefield Group, he practiced law at the American Center for Law & Justice, advising national and international clients. His practice focuses on upholding the Constitution and keeping all levels of government accountable to the people. He has written extensively on issues of educational equity and on the dignity and rights of people with developmental disabilities, drawing poignant insights from the life of his sister, Mary.

“ From my time teaching history in Nashville, I know what can really make a difference in the lives of students. As an attorney, I have fought to keep the government accountable to the people. And as a small business owner, I know things are more complicated that they need to be. Raising our two young boys with my wife Palmer, we want to be part of building a better tomorrow for them- and for every Tennessean. ”

Before beginning his legal career, Joseph taught U.S. history and civics at Whites Creek High School in Nashville. As an undergraduate at Vanderbilt University, he was elected Student Body President. As a Vanderbilt Law School student, he led the Federalist Society and Christian Legal Society.

Active in advocating for quality school options for all students, Joseph serves as the Chairman of the Board at STRIVE Collegiate Academy. He and his wife, Palmer, live with their two young sons in Crieve Hall, and teach Sunday School at Redemption City Church, where he serves as an elder.
